A few months after retirement in 1986, Autodesk was incorporated in Delaware to separate itself from the family business and because of exchange rate concerns. The company moved its headquarters from Menlo Park to San Rafael, California in 1991. It has been based since 1994 at 50 First Street, San Rafael, California 94901-4028 (USA). For about two decades (1991–2011) Autodesk was the world's largest independent computer-aided design software manufacturer. In mid-2011 Siemens AG agreed to buy Autodesk for $1.3 billion in cash plus the assumption of about $200 million in debt that was owed by its then sole subsidiary, AutoDesk Inc. The purchase was approved by the board of directors at both companies on September 28. The acquisition was closed on October 3, 2011. Shareholders of AutoDesk Inc. will receive $33.12 per share in cash for each common share of AutoDesk Inc. Autodesk develops and sells software to design, visualize, and simulate ideas for movies, television programs, video games, apps, cars and trucks, airplanes and more. Autodesk serves the entertainment, manufacturing, construction, manufacturing service and engineering markets primarily in the following product categories: animation 3D design, metal casting design, simulation (including CAE), architectural visualization (including AR) and CAD. Not all Autodesk software products are available for free. Select Autodesk products are "download only." Autodesk Incorporated was founded in March 1983 by David DeWalt after he left Intuit in 1981. When David retired in 1986 the company was incorporated in Delaware to remove itself from Intuit's control. It moved to San Rafael, California in 1991 and became an independent company that same year.
